6. C

Options a), b) and d) are grammatically incorrect.

Option A - In the sentence, "that it was essential that things they portrayed", definite article (the) should be used in front of the noun(things).

Option B- This sentence implies that having every relevant detail shown as clearly as possible is important for the things that Egyptians portray. However, having every detail shown was important for the effective functioning of the things Egyptians portray. Hence this is grammatically incorrect.

Option D - Consider the phrase "that when they portrayed things, it should have". The correct phrasing would be "that when they portrayed things, they should have" or "that when they portrayed a thing, it should have". There is a singular plural mismatch occurring here. Hence this option is incorrect as well.

The correct sentence is "The ancient Egyptians believed it was essential that the things they portrayed had every relevant feature shown as clearly as possible, so that when these objects were magically reanimated through the correct rituals, they would be able to function effectively."

Statements A and D have no errors. Statement B is wrong because it is in present tense whereas the passage as a whole is in the past tense. Similarly, C is wrong because of the use of present tense in the word 'seem'. The correct usage in this context is 'seemed'. In statement E, the article 'an' should precede the word 'effort'.

A request for milk powder is being made. In option c), the word 'please' is redundant after the use of the word 'request'. The sentence in option d) is incorrect because of the use of the word 'can'. The word 'may' should replace it. Between options a) and b), b) is a better construction. It is concise and clear.

Option C and Option D are incorrect as the author talks about writing without affectation i.e. writing without any pretension. Hence, it can be mistaken for writing without consideration or care and not writing fast.

Between options A and B, A contains the correct phrase 'at random'. The phrase means without a care and in a disorderly manner. "Writing randomly" does not carry the same implication. Also, here the modifier 'random' is a misplaced modifier. It is modifying the way of writing instead of modifying what is written.

Option D is the correct answer.

In a sentence where "as well as" is used, the verb must agree with the noun before the "as well as" phrase. Here, the verb was/were refers to the noun 'professor'. As professor is singular, the correct verb to be used here is 'was'.

Hence, option A is correct.

VIEW SOLUTION

24. C

The context indicates that the action would be completed at some point in the future i.e. the patient will have passed away at some point in the future. Hence, the correct tense to use in this case is the future perfect tense i.e. 'would be delayed'. The sentence gives two reasons for administering quick death and hence these two reasons should be separated by the conjunction 'and'. From the context, we can infer that there will be a delay of a few days if quick death is not administered by the doctor. Hence, a negative conjunction like otherwise is needed for the sentence to make sense. Hence, option C.

 VIEW SOLUTION

36. C

The idiom used in these sentences is "not __, but __". So, the two phrases that follow 'not' and 'but' must be parallel.

In sentence A, the phrase after 'but' starts with the subject but the phrase after 'not' doesn't. Hence, sentence A has a parallelism error. There are no other errors in sentence A. Option A is wrong.

All the options that have the same error can be eliminated. In sentence B, "not that it is" and "but it is" are not parallel. Hence, option B is wrong.

Similarly, option D is also wrong because the phrases "not it is" and "but that it is" are not parallel.

This error is corrected in option C. "Not that it is" and "but that it is" are parallel and hence option C is the correct answer.

 VIEW SOLUTION

The word who/whom refers to the "people". In this context, "who" is the correct usage.

It is essential to understand the use of pronouns here. 'Who' and 'Whom' are relative pronouns. However, they are associated differently with personal and possessive pronouns. Whenever the subject is represented via personal pronouns (like he/she/it etc.), 'who' is utilized in the sentence. If the main subject can be replaced by a possessive pronoun (like him/her/his/their etc.), we use 'whom' in the sentence. You can ask simple questions to understand this concept. For example:

You can ask: "Who took my pencil?"

You say: "He/She took it" (personal pronouns)

You do not say: "Him/Her took it" (possessive pronouns)

You can ask: "Whom did you meet yesterday?"

You say: "I met him/her yesterday" (possessive pronouns)

You do not say: "I met he/she yesterday" (personal pronouns)

Hence, sentences wherein 'whom' is followed by/used alongside 'he' is incorrect. Luckily, all the options, except Option A, have this usage and can be easily discarded.
