In a large company, ... 1 ... people is about as common as using a gun or a switch-blade to ... 2 ... an argument. As a result, most managers have little or no experience of firing people, and they find it emotionally traumatic; as result, they often delay the act interminably, much as an unhappy spouse will prolong a bad marriage. And when the firing is done, it's often done clumsily, with far worse side effects than are necessary. Do the world-class software organizations have a different way of firing people? No, but they do the deed swiftly, humanely, and professionally. The key point here is to view the fired employee as a 'failed product' and to ask how the process ... 3 ... such a phenomenon in the first place.

The words to be used in sentences 4 and 5 are 'internment', which means 'act of confining' and 'unsociable'.

Option a) is the correct answer.

 VIEW SOLUTION

94. A

The first blank should have a word signifying something that denotes power or hold over people. The author is trying to say that education and propaganda are being used to control people's minds. Tenets, institutions, organs and departments can influence or control something and thus fit in the first blank. Aspects, which means features, does not convey something that exercises power or influence over people. Thus, we can eliminate option B.

The second blank should contain a word that indicates adherence. "Suited by" should be followed by a word that indicates something that people want to continue doing. Thus, we can eliminate repulsion and inhibitions. The word "tradition" does not fit in grammatically. If the author has to say that people want to adhere to tradition, then the missing blank should have "a traditional mindset". The word tradition by itself does not fit the blank.

Hence, option A.

In point H, the school changed its form to a museum, so H-C is a pair.

Option d) is the correct answer.

 VIEW SOLUTION

97. B

The use of the word 'though' at the beginning of the sentence suggests that the two words should be of contrasting nature. This rules out present in the first blank. The words 'market' and 'popular' in the first and second blanks do not make sense. The correct choice of words is 'future' and 'popular'. Hence, option b).

 VIEW SOLUTION

98. B

Keen, willing and enthusiastic means the same, that is eager to do something. Kin means a relative which is different in this context.

 VIEW SOLUTION
